Summary

Tackling climate change requires deep, self-sustaining, and lasting (positive) transformational change. The networking event will involve sharing about the experience of the Climate Investment Fund's Transformational Change Learning Partnership (TCLP). CIF supports over 300 projects across 72 countries in the areas of clean energy, energy access, climate resilience, and sustainable forests. The TCLP is a global evidence-based learning collaboration bringing people together to share their work and advance transformational change in climate action around the world at scales from local to global.

About Climate Investment Funds

The Climate Investment Funds (CIF) were created in 2008 to scale up finance for climate action, by filling urgent financing gaps, demonstrating the viability of emerging solutions, and gathering lessons to inform both CIF and the broader international climate finance architecture. With more than U.S.$8 billion contributed from 14 donor countries, CIF supports over 300 projects across 72 countries in four areas: clean energy, energy access, climate resilience, and sustainable forests. As a learning laboratory for climate finance and action, CIF's Transformational Change Learning Partnership (TCLP) has engaged in stakeholder-driven, evidence-based learning since 2017. In 2020, the TCLP's growing global network is collaborating on understanding deepening our collective understanding transformational change and how to realize positive, deep, systemic, and lasting transformational change in climate action.
